

Fenland Archaeological Society Presents
What did our neolithic ancestors eat?
A Talk by Dr Tamsin O'Connell

© Ladybird Books

Did Neolithic People really hate fish? Dr O'Connell is a chemist focussing on biomolecular archaeology and isotopic analysis in archaeological and ecological contexts. In other words, she is an expert in determining what our ancestors ate through scientific examination of the food remains archaeologists often find.

Tamsin heads up the Department of Archaeology at Cambridge University where she has worked since 2004 having started academic life as a chemist at Oxford University. FenArch are delighted to welcome her and are excited that such a renowned academic can find time to speak to us.

Booking essential so text 07775 342 159 or email info@fenarch.org.uk and book your place.

To be held at The Chapel, Wisbech General Cemetery, North End, Wisbech, PE13 1PE

7:00 pm Wednesday 22nd February 2023

Admission £4-00 for non-members (pay on the door)